“ My dreams as a kid were quite different from now. I don't dream a lot now or anymore, but as a kid I used to dream about being in the ocean. And I used to dream with castles, lots of castles. Driving cars. Fast cars into the castles. I always wanted to be a superpower person when I was a kid and then, when I grew up, I didn't know what to do . . . And I still don't. ”

ERMENEGILDO
ZEGNA

"I looked at the influence of workwear as uniform," explains Leong, when discussing Ermenegildo Zegna. It's a theme creative director Alessandro Sartori has toyed with since rejoining the Italian house. Rendering them in pastel tones, his bomber jackets take on a softer demeanor, while the pocketed parkas that strode down his latest runway show were charged with a thoroughly utilitarian feel.

Khaki hat, $595, grey jacket, $4350, grey shirt, $1250, and grey pants, $1350, all by Ermenegildo Zegna.

HERMÈS

"Sportswear in the 18th and 19th centuries mainly referred to equestrian attire," says Leong. Perhaps then, we can credit the conception of a 'sports uniform' to the house of Hermès. Today, the brand's equestrian roots take form in re-imagined accents, such as the veneer of a patent leather jacket or the polish that comes with a hand-stitched belt.

Green jacket, $3560, and navy pants, $1245, both by Hermès; glasses, stylist's own.
